MINUTES BLACKFOOT M.D. ANNUAL MEETING

The minutes of the Fifth Annual Meeting of the ratepayers of Blackfoot M. D. No. 218 held in the Community Hall at Gleichen on Saturday Feb. 17, 1927, commencing at 1.1 p.m.

About 50 ratepayers were present among them being Reeve Thorsen, Deputy Reeve McBean and Councilors Maynard, Elder and Daw.

The returning officer, Mr. Harry Buckley, called the meeting to order and conducted an election for chairman which resulted in Mr. J. A. McArthur being chosen to fill that position.

On taking the chair the Chairman asked for nominations for secretary of the meeting and the secretary of the Municipality was elected to act as such.

The following program was then adopted on motion of Messrs W. F. Ferguson and David McBean:

1. Reading and disposal of the minutes of the last meeting.
2. Discussion of the Financial Statement.
3. Discussion on Roads.
4. Discussion on Weeds.
5. Discussion on the Hall Insurance business.
6. Miscellaneous business.

The minutes of the last annual meeting were then read.

Messrs David McBean and J. E. Ostrander: That the minutes be adopted as read.—Carried.

The second item on the program was then taken up. Several questions regarding certain expenditures were asked and satisfactorily answered.

Some discussion then took place regarding the salary paid the secretary. Although the remuneration paid that official has not been altered since 1923 one ratepayer criticised the council for paying the secretary his present salary and advised them in his opinion the salary should not be set according to what other municipal districts were paying, but according to the man's qualification; but that the main object was to secure some one who would do the work for less money. On being questioned he admitted that he did not hire his own help in that manner. On request of another ratepayer extracts were read from the financial report of a neighboring municipality compared with similar items from our own financial statement. These showed that although the secretary of that municipal district had been paid $2,800 last year there was still owing him at the end of the year somewhat over $200 and that on December 31st last there stood on his roll uncollected taxes amounting to over $200,000 whereas the uncollected taxes on the roll of this municipality at that date were less than $27,000 and the salary of our secretary is only $2,400.

The next item on the program was that of road work discussion.

The reeve gave a short address in which he brought out the following important facts:

1. That this municipality is responsible for the building and maintaining of at least 400 miles of road.
2. That the average cost of building one mile of road is approximately $600.
3. That when built it will cost no less than an average of $30 per mile to maintain.
4. That maintenance charges will continue to increase as the building program proceeds.
5. That the average expenditure for the past five years is only sufficient to cover maintenance charges when all roads are built.
6. That it is impossible to both build and maintain our roads on the amount of money now set aside each year for that purpose.
7. That if a permanent road program is to be carried out money therefore can only be secured by an increase in taxation.

Canadian Legion Annual Meeting

The annual meeting of the Gleichen Branch of the Canadian Legion of the British Empire Service League was held in the Club room of the Community Hall on Friday last.

There was a fair attendance in spite of the stormy weather and a number of counter-attractions. The ordinary routine of business was pursued. Particular attention was given to the various cases of comrades now residents of the Salvation Army Endeavour Home here in Gleichen, who are making representations to the Pension Appeal Board in the hope that they may receive favorable consideration.

The report from the Dominion Convention of the Canadian Legion held in Winnipeg during January was presented by G. H. Gooderham, who had been appointed official delegate from the Gleichen Branch.

On a motion of the meeting, the sitting officers of the year 1926 were elected for the ensuing year 1927. The following will be in office: President, C. H. Gooderham; Vice-President, R. W. Brown; 2nd Vice-President, John Boyd; Secretary, J. Ostrander; Executive Committee: James Bates, V. Symes and Geo. Moss. The personnel of all standing committees will be prepared by the executive in the very near future.

On the unanimous approval of the meeting it was agreed that a Women's Auxiliary be formed. To this end it was proposed to have a meeting of a more or less social nature sometime in March at which members hope to bring ladies who are either relations or whose relations have been engaged in any wars under the British flag. The Branch has found the establishment of a fixed one of their own, and with the cooperation of the ladies, as well as the united effort of the members of the Gleichen Branch, should be able to establish itself firmly in the community with high ideals and the respect of all citizens. Negotiations are under way with the owner of a block in Gleichen with regard to the purchase of a home for the Branch in the near future.

SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA ENTERTAIN AT EVENTIDE HOME

The Salvation Army Eventide Home was the place of a visit by the Gleichen Symphony Orchestra and Town Band last Thursday evening. Some fifteen players spent a full evening at the Home entertaining the inmates there. A full program of marches and waltzes was rendered, interspersed with vocal and violin solos as well as a duet on the violin and the clarinet, which were very much appreciated and the pleasure of the old people was unbounded. Adjutant and Mrs. Johnstone, who are in charge of the Home, had a splendid lunch prepared for the musicians. Many interesting curios from India were viewed, where Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone had spent a good number of years in missionary work. The evening was one of great delight to the players as well as the listeners and it is to be hoped that in the near future it will be possible to repeat the pleasant evening.

The matter of an increase in taxes to build more and better roads was strongly opposed by some of the ratepayers present. Several of those in favor of an extension of good roads throughout the municipality drew the attention of the meeting to the fact that the opposition to such a policy came from those living close to market and where good roads already existed, besides all were paying and had paid taxes and many were yet without good highways on which to haul their produce to market.

In order to test the opinion of those present the following resolution was moved by Messrs. M. Bolinger:

Resolved: That the ratepayers of the Gleichen Municipality be requested to vote in favor of an extension of good roads throughout the municipality, and that the ratepayers be requested to vote in favor of an extension of good roads throughout the municipality, and that the ratepayers be requested to vote in favor of an extension of good roads throughout the municipality.

The program rendered was as follows:

- O! Canada!
On the Alert.
Evening Breeze.
Acadia Overture.
Song, by Mr. J. C. Barron.
On the Hike.
Milady Overture.
Piano Solo, by Mr. Jas. Egleso.
Violin Solo, by Mr. Alex. Lewis.
It made you Happy.
Faded Flowers.
Violin and Clarinet duet, by Messrs. Barron and Webber.
Ole South.
Song, by Mr. J. C. Barron.
Star of the Orient.
The Flying Ace.
God Save the King.

The artists who composed the orchestra were:

Where Wolves Will Run With Huskie Dogs

An entirely new and unique test will soon be made at the Chateau Frontenac, Quebec, by Arthur Beauvais, driver of the Frontenac dog team. He has three wolves which he has reared from babyhood. These have been kept in a kennel in the same building with his huskies. They are shy little things and appear as aliens among the dogs. They are not as playful as pups, and to overcome their shyness Beauvais often puts three little huskie pups in for playmates when they forget themselves and seem less homesick for their parents and the great outdoors.

These little creatures are now only eight months old, yet in this short time have learned much of mortals, and they have already had one trip to Boston where they were exhibited by the Canadian Pacific Railway at the Sportsman's Show.

One morning a brand new sporty looking collar was placed on one, and the dignity this wild animal suddenly acquired was amazing. It was like a child with new shoes. It turned its little head first one side, then the other and sat down in a delicate manner, all four feet together and held its head high haughtily and aid with its eyes "now look at me". Do wild animals understand? Yes indeed, that wild beast was as self-conscious as any human decked out in a new regalia.

Shortly after the return of the wolves from Boston, one of the little creatures sprained its shoulder. When Beauvais entered the building and went up to the kennel, or compartment allotted them, which has wire netting around, the poor little thing came up to him for sympathy. It was duly rubbed with lotions and cared for, not in the least resenting anything which was done for it.

Symphony Orchestra Excelleht Entertainers

The Gleichen Symphony Orchestra rendered a rare treat Monday night in the Gleichen Community Hall, one that will not be forgotten for a long time by those who had the pleasure of hearing it.

The night was rather stormy and contra attractions no doubt responsible for the hall being only about half filled. Absentees may well be regretted that they missed.

That the entire entertainment was good there is no gainsaying; in fact it proved no little surprise to all that such a splendid evening's entertainment should be rendered by local talent in so short a time after organization. However, aside from this fact the program was really excellent and one that Gleichen has every reason to be proud of. It is also pleasing to state that the artists were well received and most heartily enjoyed time after time to which they heartily responded, continuing for one hour and three-quarters without intermission.

The program rendered was as follows:

- 1st. Violin: R. A. Brown, J. C. Barron, and Alex. Lewis.
2nd. Violin: Wm. Sutermeister, Elmer Bolinger and Roland Wright.
1st and 2nd Cornets: Chas. Thomson, O. J. Cantelon, and Chas. Wood.
Clarinet: Cuthbert Webber.
Saxophone: B. Luna.
Bass: Otto Wilson.
Trombone: W. Brewer.
Drums: S. E. Dufoe.
Piano: J. Egleso.

QUEENSTOWN NEWS

(From our Own Correspondent)

On Monday evening of last week a large crowd of friends of Miss Wanie Bishop gathered at the home of Mrs. Wm. Brown Sr. and family to wish her farewell and to indicate their esteem by presenting her with a miscellaneous shower. Miss Bishop will shortly, we believe, be engaged in the task of setting up house keeping and the many gifts received will prove very useful, there being a large number of pieces of fine china silverware, and linen articles. Dancing to music by Dave Brown, Clark Wallace, Mrs. Asselstine and Mrs. Brown Sr. took place at intervals during the evening. After Miss Bishop had opened the gifts and read out the names of the donors to the assembled guests, a pleasing lunch was served and dancing afterward continued. Mrs. Brown, who is Miss Bishop's grandmother, is 77 years of age, but nevertheless joined in the dancing and singing with the vigor of a girl nineteen. She also rendered a Scotch song as a solo. Mrs. Olsner also entertained the crowd with several solos. The party was a great surprise to Miss Bishop. Those present included: Mr. Mrs. W. F. Mallett; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Olsner; Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Miller; Mr. and Mrs. I. C. Asselstine; Mr. and Mrs. J. McLaughlin; Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dunsen; Mr. and Mrs. J. Olsner; Mrs. C. Hilger; Miss Fletcher; Miss B. Buckley; Miss T. Ferngren; Miss Iren Eller; Miss H. Soli; Miss A. Blue Clarke Wallace; Frank Durston; Al Soli; Fred Millican; W. F. Durston; O. J. Hanson; Reg. Campbell; Lloyd Durston; Wilmer and Sonny Mallett; Allen Blue; Miss W. Bishop and members of the Brown family.

"The Campus Flirt" with Bob Daniels was the picture shown in hall here last week. A good crowd present and thoroughly enjoyed the picture. A young lady, veneer with the "finish" obtained at a European finishing school, enters a coeducational college, and finally emerges without her expensive "finish" but with the admiration and liking of her college mates. Many very funny incidents feature the progress of the plot. A comedy entitled "Wet Paint" preceded the feature. This week Rin-Tin-Tin comes back in "Below the Line," Harold Lloyd will be with us sometimes in March in a new picture "The Kid Brother."

The prizes were awarded as follows:

- Ladies best costume, Miss Kettle son.
Gentlemen's best costume, Mr. L. Cuthbert.
Ladies comic, Mrs. Pifer.
Gentlemen's comic, Mr. O'Bury.

A list of those who were good enough to sign the cards supplied with the title of their costumes is crowded out but will appear next issue.

THE TUCKABACHEE CORNER

The Gleichen community will no doubt wonder what has happened to the Tuckabatchee Tuxis Square as we have not had a report in the Call for some time. However, we will now make up for non-previous reports.

It really starts with the meeting held at Mrs. Bolinger's the boys had a splendid business meeting after which Mrs. Bolinger and Mildred served two kinds of pie, doughnuts and coffee.

The one delightful event in the lives of the boys was the party at the home of Mrs. Geo. Evans. Here we had contests, games and a real social time. Mrs. W. W. Brown assisted Mrs. Geo. Evans in serving the good things to eat which vanished with amazing rapidity.

Then, again a full attendance was surely at the home of Mrs. Mobbs who invited the whole class over for a meeting and social hour. We certainly appreciated the big successful meeting. Mrs. Mobbs served refreshments finishing with plenty of ice cream.

The last meeting was held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Taylor. The business took longer than usual as the plans were made for a father and son banquet to be held in March. After the discussion a most delicious supper was served by Mrs. Taylor and Mrs. Brown. A hearty vote of thanks was given by the class. Phone Malcolm Brown where the next meeting is to be held.

There was a rabbit drive at G. I. Campbells Monday of last week. A number of enthusiastic hunters were on hand and succeeded in bagging up a few of the prey. Gus Risvol was on hand, and did much of the slaughtering with a large club. Others carried guns, rifles, and clubs. The warm weather rather cut down on the catch, but the hunters report a good time.

Miss Siegel's Recital Friday, March 4th

On Friday evening, March 4, Miss Theresa M. Siegel of Calgary, one of Alberta's most talented and popular entertainers, will make her first appearance before a Gleichen audience. Miss Siegel is a graduate of the Chafee-Noble School of Expressions, and during recent years has delighted audiences in many parts of the prairie provinces with her varied programs of dramatic and humorous recitals. The fact that she can draw audiences in her own city that fill the largest auditoriums, and that repeatedly, is evidence of the very fine quality of her work. It has been decided that she will present, on her initial program in Gleichen, one of her miscellaneous programs. You will not only be thrilled by her dramatic numbers, but you will laugh heartily and healthily at her humorous numbers. This will be a rare treat. Do not miss it. TWIN BIRTHDAY SURPRISE PARTY

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John Ferguson was the scene of a very pleasant birthday surprise party last Tuesday evening given in honor of Mr. Ted Shaw and Frank Mauza, and was attended by a large company of young people from Gleichen and the neighborhood of Stobart. It is reported of Ted that he didn't take a tumble until almost the last winter that he himself was one-half responsible for what afterwards turned out to be a most enjoyable evening for everyone present. All wished Ted and Frank many happy returns of their birthdays.

Health Broken—Lost 66 lbs. Now Well, Won Back 82 lbs.

Ottawa merchant, formerly city officer, rundown by kidney trouble. Wasted from 201 to 135 lbs.

Tanlac restored robust health; now weighs 217 lbs. and feels fine

Philias Seguin's story at 255 St. Patrick St., is well known in Ottawa. Mr. Seguin was formerly a police officer. When ill-health seized him he lost weight rapidly. "I had kidney trouble for 6 years," he tells, "and was given up as a hopeless case. Many times, from sheer weakness, I have fallen where I stood, and had to be helped to my feet."

"Pains racked my entire system, especially my back, which felt like splitting. Needless to say, I could neither eat nor sleep normally. Weak spells and nervousness would leave me trembling all over. I faded away from 201 to 135 lbs., and tried endless treatments and remedies in those 6 years without result."

"I had begun to despair, and when a friend advised Tanlac I was skeptical. But one month's regular use of this wonderful medicine convinced me that I was on the road to health. I kept on taking Tanlac and to my delight and surprise it made me a new man in a surprisingly short time."

Now I weigh 217 lbs., eat and sleep like a healthy boy, and feel like a different man altogether. If neglected or overworked are taking toll of your health, try Tanlac. It is nature's own tonic, made from roots, herbs and berries. Your druggist has it. Over 62 million bottles sold.

It's All In The State Of Mind

If you think you are beaten, you are;
If you think you dare not, you don't;
If you think you'll lose, you will;
If you think you're not good, you won't;
If you think you'll never be rich,
You won't become so;
Success begins with a fellow's will—
It's all in the state of mind.

Full many a race is lost
Ere even a race is run,
And many a coward fails
Ere even his work's begun.
Think big, and your deeds will grow;
Think small and you fall behind;
Think that you can and you will;
It's all in the state of mind.

If you think you are outclassed, you are;
You've got to think high to rise;
You've got to be sure of yourself before
You can ever win a prize.
Life's battles do not always go
To the stronger or faster man;
But sooner or later, the man who wins
Is the fellow who thinks he can.

Throughout Western Canada people are now eagerly looking forward to the backup of winter and are beginning to plan for the season's work which lies ahead. The farmer is giving thought to the crops he will sow, arranging to overhaul his machinery, looking into the matter of good, clean seed, and is becoming impatient for the frost to come out of the ground in order that he may begin turning over the furrows. The farm wife is beginning to think of her poultry and vegetable garden. In the cities and towns plans are being laid for building operations, civic officials are preparing programmes of improvements, men and women are studying seed catalogues and dreaming of their gardens to be. Everywhere, everybody is looking forward.

People, too, are asking themselves the question: "What will the year bring forth?" Generally, a feeling of optimism prevails. Perhaps never before in Canada's history has there been such unanimity among the heads of all banks, insurance companies, financial and industrial concerns, railway executives, and business men,—usually of the most cautious and conservative type,—in predicting that Canada is on the eve of remarkable, unprecedented development. There is a hopeful feeling everywhere.

It is believed that 1927 will be a year of opportunity, although nothing in the nature of a "boom" is expected or desired. Western people have surely learned the lesson that substantial, permanent progress can only rest on strong foundations; that to build on paper is to invite disaster. For this reason there is danger that some people will be blind in grasping opportunities which present themselves even though they are in a sound position to take full advantage of them. Their very thinliness, their lack of confidence in themselves, or in their country, may be their own undoing.

The lines quoted at the opening of this article are, however, not directed only to the attention of those who are fearful of launching out on some enterprise this year, but to all the people of Western Canada at this time as they plan for the year's work ahead.

It is true today, as it has always been true, that the person who thinks he is beaten, is beaten. The beginning of success is the "will" to succeed; the determination never to acknowledge defeat. This, too, is our British birthright. Many and many a time in our Empire's history the outlook has been dark, defeat seemed inevitable, but our people would never admit it and fought on and on until victory was achieved and success crowned their efforts.

One of the factors in enabling George Young to swim Catalina channel and win the big prize offered was his confidence in himself. He was confronted with obstacles from the beginning of his journey from Toronto to California and all along the way, but he was convinced of his ability to win, and win he did. Courage and perseverance were his watchwords. He possessed the right state of mind.

Western Canadians, with their country of wonderful resources as an asset, can accomplish almost anything to which they back up their minds and to which they devote their energies with real determination to achieve. Amazing things have been accomplished in the past, but the present offers equally great opportunities and still greater things can be done and richer rewards won if our people are convinced they can do these things and make up their minds to do them.

Republican Form of Government Saves German Taxpayers Millions

German taxpayers are finding that a republican form of government pays in cold cash. Where they used to be assessed $10,000,000 annually to maintain the royal heads of state, the Presidency this year is to cost only $226,000.

President von Hindenburg's nominal salary is only $15,000, but various personal allowances bring his real salary up to $75,000. To this is added another $150,000 for the executive staff expenses.

Under the monarchy the State of Prussia alone paid the Hohenzollerns $1,500,000 a year, in addition to keeping up nearly seventy castles, palaces, hunting lodges, yachts, riding horses and motor cars. President von Hindenburg gets only two hunting lodges, one chauffeur and a hunting lodge, in addition to the executive mansion. The late Socialist President Friedrich Ebert had a combined salary and personal expense account of only $17,000.

Is Considered a Miracle

Body of Rumanian Priest Dead Two Centuries Is Well Preserved

A glass casket to display the well preserved body of a priest dead two hundred years has been ordered by the peasants of the Glac district, Rumania. They took upon the preservation of the body around which six wooden coffins have crumbled as a miracle. Doctors have tried to explain to the peasants why the body is in good condition, but they prefer to accept the theory of supernatural.

To pay for the expensive glass casket an adulation fee is to be charged of those viewing the body.

FELT VERY WEAK

Had No Ambition and Had to Rest Frequently

Mrs. Wm. J. Griffin, Telikummah, Manitoulin Island, Ont., is one of the many thousands of women who was run-down and bloodless, and who has found new health through Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says:—"For a number of years I felt very weak and had no ambition. I found it very difficult to do my housework and had to rest frequently. As time passed my condition grew decidedly worse, and my feet and legs were badly swollen. My husband told the doctor of my condition, and he gave me medicine. Then my baby came and the doctor attended me. He said I had severely injured my blood in my body—that it had turned to water. I continued taking his medicine for a time, but did not feel that it was doing me any good. Then I started to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. In a short while I felt better, and after taking the pills for a couple of months I felt like a new person. Where my work used to be a drag upon my strength I enjoy doing it now, and I will always recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to weak people."

If you will send your name and address to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., they will mail you a little book called "Building Up the Blood," which contains many health hints. You can get the pills through any medicine dealer or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Not a Worker's Paradise

Russians Receive Meagre Pay and Dare Not Ask More

For nearly ten years Russia has been under the "dictatorship of the proletariat," but not greatly to the advantage of the proletariat. It seems. A bulletin issued by the International Labor Bureau at Geneva shows the rates of wages received in Soviet Russia. Last summer Russian workmen were getting 2.33 chervonets rubles a day. Before the war a ruble was worth a little more than half a dollar; it is worth much less now. But even if the Russian workers were receiving as much as a dollar a day that would be meagre pay indeed when it is considered that the prices of all the necessities of life have advanced enormously.

But they must not demand more. It is dangerous to do that. In reply to a deputation of trade unionists who went to him begging for more pay, M. Tomsky, of the Soviet council and president of the trade unions, told them that they must be patient and wait—that wages could not be raised until general economic conditions improved. And he added that the general council would deal very severely with union groups that did not accept the decision of the council and the Soviet government in the matter of wages and working conditions. No, the proletariat is not having a good time in the realm where the proletariat is supposed to rule.

More recently Prince Chichibu of Japan selected Magdalen as his college and took the very rooms the Prince of Wales occupied.

Work for Convicts

Would Employ Jail Labor in Pick- ing Over Seed Grain

"I believe that if penal institutions throughout the country would adopt a system of employing jail labor during the winter months in picking over farmer's seed grain, that a great all-round benefit to the crops of Canada would result," Memo G. Dawson, governor of the county jail here commented today with regard to his experiment of employing jail prisoners to pick over beans instead of working on the customary "rock pile."

"Farmers could arrange with jails to have their seed grain picked over at a nominal price and the money thus earned could be turned over to the prisoner's wife or family," said the governor.

Unusual Phenomena to be Witnessed in England on June 29

English astronomers are preparing to view on June 29, the first total eclipse of the sun which has visited England in 263 years and the last one until 1999.

The belt of country in which the eclipse will be total is only 80 miles wide, running from the north of Wales in the west to Hartlepool on the North Sea in the east. So popular is the interest in the unusual event that several railroads will run special trains to various points in the belt.

The total eclipse begins over England at 5.25 a.m. Greenwich mean time, and is visible in its totality from 21.7 seconds in the west to 21.5 seconds in the east.

Astronomers here point out that with a total eclipse, such as will be seen this year, the corona is visible, which is not the case with partial eclipses.

Several parties of astronomers are planning expeditions to Norway, where the visibility will be better than in England. Three Greenwich astronomers will take two telescopes and two spectroscopes to a station in Yorkshire, and other parties will go to both the west and east coast.

Clean your liver and constipated bowels to-night and feel fine

Get a ten-cent box now.
Are you keeping your liver, stomach and bowels clean, pure and fresh with Cascarets—or merely forcing a passage every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels.

No odds how sick, headachy, bilious and constipated you feel, a Cascaret tonight will straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver and bowels regular for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a gentle cleansing, too.

The bill is designed to meet a situation such as arose last year when Right Rev. Arthur Whittington-Ingram, Bishop of London, while on a visit to Ontario was prevented from officiating at the marriage of a relative, because permission was not provided under the act.

The Last Slaves

No Slavery Exists Wherever Floats the British Flag

With the abolition of slavery in Burma, ordered last month by the British Government, the last slave will disappear from territory under the control of Great Britain. Thus, within the space of ninety-four years the greatest menace to freedom and to development the world has ever known has been swept out of the British Empire. It has not been an easy task, for many vested rights, treaty reservations, and inherited privileges had to be dealt with. But the policy inaugurated by the British Government in the British West Indies in 1833 had been faithfully and steadily pursued ever since. Today no slavery exists beneath the British flag, or in British protectorates. Various forms of compulsory industrial service are still in vogue in far-off outposts and in certain African territories, but these are dying out, and with the spread of education and the introduction of broader privileges, they will become obsolete. It is a thing concerning which Britons may be well content. The march of justice and liberty may be slow, but it is irresistible. The Montreal Star.

In the long, low ceilinged dining room of Villa Amette, they sat across from each other over a table of exquisite napery and massive silver things. A butler and the serving maid stood silent, immobile between corners, at the end of the spacious room. It wasn't at all like the dingy, coffee-colored restaurant around the corner from John's work room in New York, where they used to "have carfare," as she had called it, by doing the best they could for thirty cents apiece. "You must tell me all about it, now," Joanna prompted him, when the servants stepped back to their post. "You must begin at the beginning. Your letters have been so tantalizing. You let me know at all what happened to bring you out of your workroom into fame. It is as mysterious to me as my own situation still is. He told her with the air of one who repeats an old story. He thought he had explained it all in his letters.

"I was called in, one day, by Mr. Foreman, you remember, head of the firm I worked for? He swept me off my feet by asking if I had not some idea of a memorial, and he described to me just what you and I had talked over so much. We spent an hour over it. I think I got enthusiastic. He reminded me that several times I had spoken of it in the draughting rooms to the other boys. One of them I suppose, had mentioned it to him. The firm always was interested in the ideas of its apprentices. And he had passed the thought on to someone who, he said, had become concerned. That's all there was to the start of it. Things just happened suddenly.

"They do, sometimes," Joanna remarked.

"Foreman took me to his house. Two or three of our great architects were there. I had my plans—those plans I used to show to you, Jo. The ones you said made your head dizzy. Then it happened! Someone who is close to Foreman put up the money for me to go ahead. It was promised me that all funds necessary would be found to make the idea materialize. Some societies were interested, contributions began to pile up. Discussion began. Money was made available for me to work out and build a huge model. I've almost finished that, now. Whatever I need in the way of help is available when the model is finished. I am assured. There is to be world wide competition among sculptors for the figure of the girl that will surmount the great dome. That's all. Foreman knows the backers. Didn't he?"

"But the thought of the girl, John, that's an original idea, and new, wasn't it? And it's so splendid."

John was silent a moment. Joanna kept her glance on his face. "That is an odd circumstance," he said, slowly. "During that first interview with Mr. Foreman, when he brought up my secret idea, he made the suggestion of symbolizing the romance behind the soldier with the figure of a young girl, representing the youth of all ages. He had worked out that thought himself, or it had been worked out for him. Strangely, too, it seemed to me you had said one time, when you did bother your head by listening to me, that every soldier you knew of went away to fight with a girl's kiss on his lips. I remembered you said soldiers seemed to be satisfied with their girl, anyhow, if other people did distrust them. Foreman had the same idea. So I adopted it. It's caught.

After a time restraint settled between them again. They went into the moonlit grounds for a turn among the gardens. They came upon a thicket of thorn. "I'm having a pavilion built," Joanna explained, "for the dancing at my fête. I'm having a party you know!" she volunteered, "early next month. Everyone expects something of the sort among the villas down here, and I'm going to do my best. It was Brandon's idea. He and Yvonne are supervising the details. I'm spending the money. We shall make it something to talk about."

"Yes," John murmured, "all that you do—with the money that was given to you, seems to make people talk. I've heard much, in London, in Paris, and even during the single day that I've been here. I asked the concierge at the hotel if he knew where the Villa Amette was. 'Oh,' he said, 'Where the Golden Girl lives? It's a gay place, M'sieur. Anyone will show you the way.' And, fancy, you gave them something to talk about at the Casino this afternoon. You're having a bright time with your money, aren't you Jo?"

"You mean to say, don't you, that I'm trifling it away?"

"You don't seem to have accomplished much," he returned. "It's quite as I told you, in New York, isn't it?"

"Quite," she agreed. "I'm just a daughter of the Babylonians, John. A daughter of the Babylonian today. People say my motto is, 'Flirt, Love, and Venture.' I'm not the kind of a girl, John, you'd put on your pedestal, am I?"

He wouldn't answer in words; yet Joanna understood that he did answer eloquently. And the shadow in her brown eyes were deeper. Yvonne recognized the depth of them when she returned, having left Kenneth behind.

"As you will be promptly possessed by Teddy," Yvonne remarked to Joanna. "I shall take charge of Mr. John. If Brandon and Roddy turn up they must create their own devices."

When the two women came down from the esoteric mysteries of their boudoirs it was Yvonne who summoned John to join her in a cocktail before they entered the car that awaited to take them back to Monte Carlo.

On the drive in from Amette it was Yvonne who talked with him, who dazzled him, led him into the subject always eager within him, his romantic project, and clothed it with the charm of her own sympathetic understanding. Joanna, silent, was almost forgotten until the car drew up at the Casino gardens. There, Dominister approached her, Yvonne, allowing John to reach in his hand to help her from the car, put her fingers into it, and allowed them to rest there until color came into his face.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Jealousy

The wide grounds of Villa Amette, reaching down the slope of Cap Martin to the sea, began to assume new perspectives of their transformations. The speculative group of workmen that had begun, two weeks before, to place their stakes, had now become a busy crew that numbered scores.

Pavilions, pergolas and stretches of polished dance floors bordered by great potted palms brought from Cannes were taking definite shape. Graceful columns, slender and curved into semblance to fairy spires rose in companies that later were to be hung with trailing green and hidden lights.

Joanna and Brandon strolled through the lawns on their customary daily inspection. Workmen teached their caps to the Golden Girl with their curiosities shining in their eyes. To them she was of more interest than the preparations they were making for the fête of which the entire Riviera talked. For a one night's whim of this strange, restless girl their hands erected an arbored bowler to be covered, for this night with the choicest roses culled from the garden of the Monaguesques in the Condamine.

Brandon and the girl stood on a knoll that the landscape gardener had left on the hill-side, and surveyed the scene that spread out before them. "Whatever celebrity has been withheld from you," Brandon observed, "will come to you after the echoes of this have reached to Nice, to Genoa, and to Paris itself. Amette has provided some splendid gaudes in his history; you are promising to outshine them all."

Joanna did not reply. Brandon looked down at her. She stood close to him, and he saw that her glance was roving over the grounds mechanically. He noted that there was little of the accustomed light of eagerness in her face. Joanna had not laughed or smiled as much or as often since John's arrival in the vicinity of Villa Amette. She had been gayer, if anything; more reckless, more persistent in her whimsical escapades. But Brandon, who studied her, sensed a shallowness in her merriments.

"It will be said of me," she murmured, at last, "that I will have earned indeed the name they have given me, Golden Girl, won't it?"

"No one doubts your right to that adorning designation now," he assured her. "Yet, until now, you haven't been so careless of the fortune that was entrusted to you, as is generally believed, isn't that right?"

She shot him a quick, almost startled glance, and then fell again to calmly examining the Amette vistas of groves and gardens peopled with noisy workmen. "You would not expect me ever to admit that I had been careless, would you?" she asked quietly. "I have done as we planned I should, as you and Yvonne and I planned after Graydon and Mr. Eggleston refused to help me with their advice. I have bought whatever seemed good to buy. That is all."

"You have been spared big jewelers' bills, I must admit," Brandon remarked, dryly. "Kenneth, Michael, Dominister—even I, have gathered a great deal of happiness in finding for you the ornaments you like."

"And when," she asked, softly, but very clearly, "are you going to exact your toll—or demand it?"

"That is an unpleasant sentiment," he said. "I, at least, of all your conquests, have asked nothing of you. I shall, of course, ask much, but not too much. And I promise I shall accept your gift, whatever it may be. You remember I promised that a long time ago."

"And have bided your time. Why?"

"I have been waiting, more or less patiently, until you had found your self. You see I preferred not to take unfair advantage of you. Others have, I believe."

Now she smiled at him, but wistfully. "You must have had great patience, waiting!" she exclaimed. "It has been terribly hard for me to find—me! Hasn't it? And the worst of it is, I'm still hunting!" He waited for her to acknowledge his concluding words—that he would not, as he thought others had, take advantage of her. But she ignored that. Before he was ready to speak, she touched his arm and then raised her hand, like a princess bounding her domain, taking in the whole expanse of the Amette acres.

"Perhaps I'll find something here, when the lights are lit and the roses hang, and the people have come. Or, perhaps you will. Who knows?" Suddenly she was serious. "It will cost enough," she added, "at any rate. Yvonne and I went over the estimates this morning. Mr. Eggleston will be shocked when the bills reach him. More than a hundred thousand dollars, I'm sure. You have made me very extravagant, you know."

"Whatever you do, must be done well," he retorted. "Isn't that a befitting ambition? I have understood, you see, that you look upon your money as a means to excitement. You will have it, when your fête is in full swing, and the memory of it will be just exhilarating. Why should one bother with costs?"

"Why, indeed?" she agreed briefly. "You still insist upon keeping this part of your program a secret."

"Yes," she replied; "you shan't know anything about this, or what I'm going to do here, until you come in under the blossom hidden room and take your seats. I'm having great fun planning my little surprise."

"Am I forbidden to speculate?"

"You are not, but you will be unsuccessful. It's to be my idea of the climax. I've asked everyone I know to remember the most sensational things other tenants of Amette have done to make their fêtes remembered."

I know about them all, from the feast presided over by the Indian rajah who presented his chosen lady the carpet of diamonds that was Naurmahal's nuptial rug, to the Moor who made a lake and had his servants suddenly throw all the women into it. I want to excel them both. There must be something startling by which to remember the Golden Girl's fête." She brushed his arm with her fingers. "Mustn't there be?" she asked.

He would have made his speculations and sought to hint of the mystery which was to be revealed upon the open air stage, but he was suddenly conscious of a stiffening of the slender body that stood close to him. He followed Joanna's gaze and saw two figures crossing the terrace which faced the Transept.

John, in flannels and blue, his strong, well set form bearing its new pose of easy confidence, stood for a moment with Yvonne at the top of the terrace steps between two stone images. Yvonne was very youthful and beautiful in the orchid tones she affected for tennis and golf. The single golf stick John carried was evidence that they had come in from a round of holes over the little Amette fairway that stretched across the ravines and flat spaces of Cap Martin. Brandon saw that Yvonne looked often into the face of the man beside her; and that she rested her hand on his sleeve, and fluttered it about his wrist. And he saw, too, that Joanna watched, and that the marks of her teeth were redder than the flesh red of her lips.

Brandon reached down and found Joanna's hand. He gave her fingers a gentle pressure. As if something startled it, her body relaxed. And as if she were announcing the conclusion of some very deep considerations, she said:

"I have decided to have the trellis roof that will be over the crowd when it gathers here for my little surprise, made with mimosa blossoms. I must have them gathered. It will take a great many."

"Have you chosen them?" Brandon asked softly. "Because you like their heavy, intoxicating perfumes, or because they reveal so many colors, and in their form are snake like?"

She waited a moment, and then said, irrelevantly it seemed: "The perfumes of mimosa either steal one's senses or lull them. They seem to match so many people."

They went toward the house, but stopped at a bench under a natural harbor that enclosed a tiny garden. Brandon gently urged her onto the bench and sat beside her.

"I have been too close to you," he said, "to fear that you will be offended with me when I ask you to drop your barriers low enough for us to talk across them—of young Willmore, and his strange fascination for Yvonne."

She stiffened immediately and attempted to rise. Brandon caught her and brought her down beside him again.

"I fancy she is only repaying me," she breathed, her glance probing the flowers at her feet. "It is said that I have stolen all her courtesies, you know. I haven't tried to, but I suppose I have. You have all wanted me to take you from her, it seems. And I've wondered why. Now it is only fair that she should do the thing that, to her, must seem retaliation."

"It is retaliation, isn't it? She is taking from you the one you'd rather not lose?"

She turned her eyes full into his. There was much of bitterness in her tone, when she answered him, and much earnestness, too.

"I am not at all sure of that. I don't think I am glad that John came down to the Riviera, but now that he has come, and I have seen him and he has seen me again, I am not very deeply concerned about him. You wanted to know just how I feel—that was your real question. Well I haven't stayed awake a single hour because Yvonne has taken a fancy to John and he is making a silly fool of himself." She was silent for a time, while Brandon watched her quickly. Joanna always added something to whatever she was serious about. As he expected it came, suddenly:

CHAPTER XXVIII

Lady Weyncuth

A car, turning in at the Amette gate and rolling up the road to the veranda of the villa, reminded Joanna that Lady Weyncuth, Teddy Dominister's sister, had telephoned early in the morning that she would like to have a come out for a chat. "Something rather personal between you and me, my dear," she had said in her impulsive, staccato way. "You may give me a cup of tea, and a brandy and soda and when we've had a chat show me over the grounds, if you will. I am all excited by what I hear of the preparations you are making for your big affair."

Brandon frowned when Joanna got up from the bench and insisted that she must go to the house to greet her visitor.

"But we were just beginning to get somewhere, weren't we?" he protested.

"Were we?" she asked, looking at him, coolly. "You were telling me that Yvonne is following the only honest path for a woman to take; that she is going straight to the goal of her desire. I believe you said that she must see some promise of novelty in stirring John's madness, and satisfaction in proving that she could go where only an angel would be welcome. You had gone so far as to advise me that it was time I drop my pretenses and take love as I find it. I didn't know you were particularly trying to get anywhere."

Brandon, who had remained on the bench when the girl stood, rose. If there was a mask to drop his face for a fleeting moment, he caught Joanna's arm and swung her about until she stood close and looked up into his face. But when he spoke his voice was like the smoothness of the motor in her Daimler car. It purred. And it was insolent.

"I said all of that, and more," he murmured. "I said that you were a cheat; an impostor in the order you have chosen to enter. You are playing every night and day of your life with flame, and foolishly think you aren't being burned, but you are. The deadliest burning, you know, is the kiss of an invisible fire that goes deep before it pains. You are being scorched by the ridicule of those who know that you only pretend that you don't understand Kenneth, Michael, and the others, and the contempt they feel is only deceitful. We had got that far."

For an instant anger flamed in the gold brown eyes that looked up into his; she trembled, and the tangerine glow came into her cheeks. Then she was calm, again, and inscrutable.

"But what futile progress!" she mocked him. "You read me a lesson from a book I learned by heart, long ago—when I was twenty-seven of the aliks. It used to be, you know, that we needed to be told that if we invited we would be expected to accept; that if we made ourselves into a welcome sign we might as well say 'come in.' We've learned all that now. And we know when to say 'come in' and when to say 'go to the devil!' How much further did you think to go?"

He still spoke softly; still reminding her of the low hum of the motor in her car. "Far beyond all of that, my dear Joanna! Up to the very edge of all your make-believe." Suddenly his manner changed. He dropped the hand he had held with a tight nerveless clasp. His smile came back to the corners of his mouth. He spoke airily. "But the moment has fled, hasn't it?" he exclaimed. "One must not profess love and make its demands and propose its bargains when tempers are out of tune; should they?"

She regarded him from half closed lids before she spoke. Then she said:

"You are the cheat, you know. Because you hadn't said anything about love! You'd been trying to get where ever you were starting for without that part of it. Next time, remember. Neither Roddy nor Michael were so clumsy as to forget."

OUR WINTER WEATHER

A Trying Time for People With Weak Watery Blood

Canadian winter weather is a trying time for debilitated, run-down people. The close air of shut-up houses, lack of out-of-door exercise, the restricted diet of the season, all have their effect on weakened systems. There is always in such cases the danger of severe colds, attacks of influenza, or the still more dreaded pneumonia. There is no other time of year, when a bountiful supply of rich, red blood is so necessary; and the one way to keep the blood rich and pure and thus avoid winter trouble is through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. If, unfortunately, you have fallen a victim to influenza, or other winter troubles, this same medicine will restore your health and strength. Among those who have proved the value of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is Miss Margaret Pearson, R.R. No. 3, Chatham. Miss Pearson had passed through a severe attack of influenza and says: "It left me so weak and run-down, that I could scarcely walk. Anemia set in and it almost seemed as if I would not pull through the winter, as I grew so weak that the least exertion would bring on fainting spells. I was under medical treatment, but it did not help me. Then one day in our local paper I read an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and decided to try them. By the time I had used three boxes I felt much better, and continuing the use of the pills it was not long before I felt better than I had been before the influenza attacked me. My rapid recovery surprised my friends, and when asked 'What did you do?' I would proudly say, 'Not my doing, but Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.' To me at least, the pills have been worth their weight in gold."

As a precaution against winter ills take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills now. Sold by all medicine dealers, or sent by mail at 50¢ a box by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

India Desires Autonomy

Lord Willoughby Says Conditions in the East are Changing Fast

"If we show a real desire to assist India to get control of her own affairs, and help the Indians to be masters in their own houses, I believe India will want us to stay with her for many long years," declared Lord Willoughby in an address before the Canadian Club at Ottawa. His Excellency related some reminiscences of his term as viceroy in India for 11 years.

"We must always remember," continued the Governor-General, "that the East is changing very fast and that India is determined to have more responsibility in regard to the Administration of India's affairs and determined to be treated on a basis of equality."

In his 11 years' administration of India, Lord Willoughby had found Indians on the whole loyal, very responsive, very friendly and very amenable to the laws of the land.

The Governor-General also expressed his thanks for certain assistance Canada had rendered in the Work of development of India, while he was located at Madras.

Lady Weymouth, a sprightly, energetic young woman of that English sort which possesses two distinct characters, the one that shows and the one that is hidden, often as opposite as the poles, greeted Joanna enthusiastically when the girl reached the villa and, as she reached the villa, she was aware of the fact that the visitor had chosen to wait. Joanna was fond of Teddy Dorminster's sister, but it was a shy fondness she never quite revealed. Betty Weymouth was different, some way, from others of the crowd that fitted from villa to villa, that shone resplendent with its jewels and its velvet backs at the Casino, opera, or rode, in pairs, through the quiet lanes that wandered back from the main roads by the sea. She possessed, openly, to be ever at the verge of indelicacy; but one was quietly confident that she never was. She was barely thirty, but repeatedly announced that she was in imminent danger of being arrested or being fined, or something like that, for having deliberately lopped off two years from her birth certificate. "One must knock off at least a year with every lady," she liked to declare, "and I've already got two." She was desperately unconscious of any attractiveness or worthwhileness upon the part of the earl, her brother, but often sat and talked with him for an hour at a time. Which is seldom the way between brothers of the Teddy Dorminster type and sisters of the Betty Weymouth kind. Joanna would have liked to have Lady Weymouth realize how fond she was of her, but was ever afraid Betty Weymouth would not take such appreciation seriously.

"I am all eagerness to know about your fete," the visitor said at once, "for that is all I hear whispered about. It's terribly exciting, you know, to be doing something that is whispered about. I've been trying ever since I came down from London to get someone to drop their voices about me, but they won't. I put on a scandalous affair with Michael, that night you were with us at the Opera, when you presented Mr. Wilmore, but I've never heard an echo. You're so fortunate! The night before you took just a little dash in a car with him and whispers were so thick you could cut them."

Allowed to Fly Naval Flag

Official Church of British Admiralty is St. Martin's, London

With the exception of abbey and cathedral, the best known church in the English-speaking world is probably St. Martin-in-the-Fields, London, to which a new vicar has just been appointed. The parish of St. Martin-in-the-Fields includes Buckingham Palace and St. James' Palace, and it is therefore the parish church of the King and Queen and Prince of Wales. There are in the church two Royal pews, and also seats for the use of members of the Royal Household.

The church is not actually used by royalty as the parish church, as both Buckingham Palace and St. James' Palace have chapels of their own but the King and Queen do on occasion attend services.

St. Martin's is recognized as the official church of the admiralty and is thus allowed to fly the naval flag, the White Ensign.

The church during the war earned for itself the title of the church of the "Open Door," as the crypt was kept open at night to house stranded soldiers and others. Even today the crypt is kept open so that wayfarers may have shelter till morning.

slip of the plural—his lady loves. And, being an English woman, she was never at a loss to turn her own slips into an advantage.

"I'm sorry I said that, my dear," she said gently. "But it is just as well, perhaps, because it will open my way. I want to talk to you about the kind of love that is spoken of in the plural." Joanna glanced at her sharply. This was a new Lady Weymouth.

"Or, it may be that it is love that isn't plural I will begin about," Lady Betty went on, after a moment's contemplation of the smoke that curled lazily from her lips. "It's about Teddy, you know. Teddy and you, dear. Teddy's an awful ass, I know, and he's kissed the head of a thousand garments when he should have stopped at the fingers. But he's always said that no woman is ever approached by a man she doesn't look on to, and I'm sure he ought to know."

Again she waited to watch the nebulous trail of the smoke wreath that lifted from her cigarette. Joanna's jade and bamboo holder was poised midway between her lips and the table. The brown eyes had become very black. Her lids were drawn close, until they shaped into two straight lines. "You mean," she said, "you want me to stop beheading?"

Lady Betty was so startled that her cigarette slipped from her fingers to the floor. A maid appeared out of her forgotten proximity and recovered it. Lady Betty did not see the hand that held the retrieved tobacco.

"We mustn't make it a skemish, my dear," she said to the girl who looked her full in the eyes. "I'm not come as a wife with a baggage to propose to her husband's mistress. I'm just Betty Weymouth dropped in to tea to ask her friend, the Golden Girl, if she won't be chummy and generous and let a good chap down—let him down easily, but let him down. He loves you, dear, and he wants you. I've always said that there wasn't a reason in the world any man oughtn't to have any woman he wanted—if she'd let him have her. That's gone for my own brother, too. But he wants you for keeps. That's different, isn't it?"

"Yes, it's different," Joanna agreed. "Women are so free to be had these days, that it's strange any man would want one—for keeps. And you think I'm not the kind he ought to have—in that way?"

Lady Betty smiled, and reached for a new cigarette. "My dear, you are so unexpected," she exclaimed brightly. "One plans a speech, or a sentiment, and you twist it into something that doesn't sound right at all and hurt it back before it's given." She was earnest again. "I mean only that it wouldn't be fair to me, my brother, to our family, and least of all to you, dear girl, if you married Teddy. It would be hell for you, in fact. And, worse than everything else, it would be hell for him. I love my brother, Joanna. He's a good sort. Throw him over, won't you, like a good girl?"

"Really, you know, I've never taken Teddy on," Joanna reminded Lady Betty. "But I might at any time."

While they waited for the maid to wheel up her tray and arrange the service, Joanna proffered Lady Weymouth a cigarette. For her own she found, on a table, an exquisite new holder that Kennedy had sent her the night before. She had others set with emeralds or rubies. This one was of bamboo in which some Chinese workman had fixed tiny bits of camphor, jade. "How gorgeous," Lady Betty cried. "First! Roddy Kennedy! To scratch the ends of the earth to save the widow of his lady loves!"

She was instantly mindful of that fact that she was not the kind he ought to have—in that way?

Lady Betty smiled, and reached for a new cigarette. "My dear, you are so unexpected," she exclaimed brightly. "One plans a speech, or a sentiment, and you twist it into something that doesn't sound right at all and hurt it back before it's given." She was earnest again. "I mean only that it wouldn't be fair to me, my brother, to our family, and least of all to you, dear girl, if you married Teddy. It would be hell for you, in fact. And, worse than everything else, it would be hell for him. I love my brother, Joanna. He's a good sort. Throw him over, won't you, like a good girl?"

"Will you tell me why I am not worthy of your brother? He knows me. You don't. You and I are common birds of prey seeking the same game. You hunt in your way, I in mine. Your thrill may be different than mine, but we're women—or, at least, if you are a woman, I'm a girl, which is the same thing. It may, or it may not be, that I shall want Lord Teddy. Why not?"

"A Dorminster always has women," the other woman returned, "and he always puts them aside for a wife. The wife must be clean, and good. Are you both, my dear? You're modern, you know. You're beautiful and lovely, and I think, honest. But you're all body. I'm all body, too, but I haven't the nerve that you have. You're not ashamed of it. A Dorminster must be ashamed of it. It's a Dorminster convention. Surely I won't have to say any more."

Will Aid Medical Science

Valuable Discovery of Three British Scientists is Being Perfected

Three British scientists are hopeful of soon perfecting a discovery which will make possible the photographing of the functions of the human organs. They believe they will be able to take pictures of the digestive organs at work, and photograph other parts of the internal machinery of man, which proceedings, while suggestive of a morbid inclination will be extremely valuable to medical science.

The three are Frederick Metville, radiologist at University College, London; E. W. Edwards and E. Warford, of British Instructional Films. The trio have already succeeded in photographing at the normal speed of the body, the movements of the limbs as seen by x-ray. This moving picture x-ray places before medical men secrets of the human body never before tabulated.

Hitherto, all x-ray photographs have been "still" pictures, and scientists all over Europe have been seeking for what the three Britishers have now found.

The discovery is classed by Edwards as a departure not only from cinematography but from x-ray science. "We have now arrived at a perfect system with regard to the photographing of the bones," he says, "but the ray which reveals the bones penetrates the tissues and in order to photograph the heart another ray will be employed and there will have to be further adaptation of the camera."

The exposure of an x-ray photograph is about half a second. The cinematograph only allows a 1/50th of a second exposure. By continual adaptation of lens and screens the camera now being used successfully was produced.

Made Hazardous Voyage

A 15,000 miles voyage from Fleetwood, England, to Melbourne, Australia, has been successfully accomplished by a number of Fleetwood fishermen in a fishing boat only 30 feet long, with a 16-foot beam and a 19-foot draught. Many people who saw the frail craft leave Fleetwood doubted her ability to overcome the difficulties of such a hazardous voyage.

A Benefactor

A public benefactor is one who helps people to be happy. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce.

It is impossible to be happy if you are suffering—in pain or distress—ill. To restore health and strength to ailing people was Dr. Pierce's mission. During his lifetime, he gave to the world a priceless herbal remedy in his Favorite Prescription, for restoring the health of weak, nervous, over-worked women, and thereby increasing happiness in the home.

As a skilled physician, an honored citizen, Dr. Pierce was known far and near for integrity and fair dealing. His phenomenal success was due to the unquestioned purity of his medicines.

Women in every walk of life today say Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has relieved them of nervousness, weakness and kindred ills. It is a reliable medicine made from roots and herbs, sold by druggists, in both fluid and tablet form. Send 10c for trial pkg. tablets to Dr. Pierce's Laboratory, Bridgeport, Ont.

Very Little Progress

Made at Singapore

Work on Naval Base Proceeding

Leisurely Says London Paper

Despatches from Singapore tell of the deliberate progress being made with the construction of the naval base at Singapore, which figured largely in the discussions of Imperial defence at the Imperial Conference, and was mentioned by the British antipodean premiers in their speeches in Canada.

Although it has been in the hands of the Admiralty for about three years, Selayar, the site of the Singapore naval base, looks today no more like a naval base than a middle reach of the Thames, and probably it is far less busy, says an article in a London paper.

Selayar is 15 miles from Singapore on the north-east side of the island, and is reached only by road. It is ten or twelve miles from the eastern end of the strait which separates Singapore Island from the mainland of Johore, and is approached by sea only from the east, although small native craft may go through the lock to the west of the causeway carrying the Singapore-Kuala Lumpur-Panang railway.

The strait is about three-quarters of a mile wide and the land at either side is covered by virgin jungle and some rubber plantations. Many acres of rubber are to be cut down for the base.

The port of Singapore is of great and growing importance to Britain's Eastern trade—its annual tonnage clearance comes next to that of Liverpool—and it is a pivotal point in the empire air routes to Australia and New Zealand. Soon it will have a four-fold importance—a commercial centre by sea and air, and a naval centre by sea and air. In addition to the export trade of rubber, tin and tropical produce from the Malay peninsula.

Its Quality Sells It.—The fact that so many thousands of intelligent people continue to use Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil speaks volumes for its healing efficiency. Ever since it was first introduced it has grown steadily in public favor, owing entirely to its manifold usefulness in relieving and healing sickness. As a specific for cuts, burns, scalds, and various inflammatory pains its record is beyond reproach.

Some Interesting Legends

According to Tradition Beefsteak Was Discovered by Roman Senator

Tradition has it that the Roman Emperor Trajan ordered Lucius Plautus, a senator, to aid in the duty of offering sacrifices to Jupiter. The senator thought that the work was beneath his dignity. He refused to obey, but was dragged to the altar. While the ox that was sacrificed to the heathen god was being roasted, the senator in contempt tore off a piece of the meat and ate it. To his surprise it was very palatable. He cut other slices and broiled them for the slaves who were present. From that moment the Romans began to like "beefsteak," and before long the old styles of Roman cookery gave way to the Plautus style.

It is said that the shroin of beef owes its name to Charles II. King of England. At dinner one day he was so much pleased with a piece of beef that he asked the name of it. "It is the loin," was the reply. "Then, said the king, 'I will knight it; henceforth it shall be Sir Loin!'"

Canada's Preventable Fires

Last year Canada had over five thousand forest fires burning over an area of nearly two million acres of which, according to the Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Department of the Interior, 90 per cent, were caused by human agency and carelessness.

Possesses Exceptional Power of Concentration

Outstanding Characteristic of Canada's Minister to U.S.

Massey possesses exceptional powers of concentration, and when interested in a business project, the preparation of an address, or the presentation of a new play, has the ability to insulate himself against any disturbance and let the world go by. He has been known to work on a problem with deep intensity for days at a time, and when he has found a solution to be as pleased as a boy with a new mechanical toy.

This power of concentration was a characteristic that caught the attention of members of the war cabinet. I remember hearing the late Sir James Lougheed former Minister of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment say "Massey is a remarkable young man. He not only has a trained mind, but he has tact and the ability to unite the efforts of those around him to an unusual degree. I believe he will go far."

Another factor in his success has been his realization of the value of time. For years he has maintained a schedule which has been the envy of his business associates. He has a record for punctuality that would make an alarm clock ashamed of its shortcomings, and his promptness in acknowledging his personal correspondence has gained the admiration of all who know him.

Bonds Strong As Steel

The British Empire is held together chiefly by bonds of sentiment. It is essentially modern, and how it is going to work out nobody knows. But in the World War it was put to a severe test, and the bonds of sentiment at that time proved about as effective as if they had been made of steel.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Rules on Alberta Coal

Evidence on Rail Rates on Coal to be Heard June 7

There is much anxiety felt by those who are urging lower rates than $9 a ton on Alberta coal to Ontario, as to whether there is any possibility of getting a decision in time to be of any assistance this year.

The board of railway commissioners to which the question was referred, ruled that statisticians representing Ontario and Alberta on the one hand, and the two railway companies on the other, get together on May 17 to compare their formulas, and the board will hear evidence on June 7 as to the cost of moving train loads of coal to Ontario.

MOTHERS PRAISE

BABY'S OWN TABLETS

Mrs. L. M. Brown, Walton, N.S., says:—"I cannot recommend Baby's Own Tablets too highly. I have found them invaluable for the ailments of little ones." Mrs. Brown's testimony is the same as that of thousands of other mothers who have used the Tablets. To use them once is a sure guarantee that they will always be kept in the home as long as there are babies or young children to be cared for. The Tablets are a laxative—mild but thorough in action—which never fail to regulate the stomach and bowels; relieve constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and make the dreaded teething period easy. In fact you banish all the minor ills from which little ones suffer. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from "The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont."

Somebody sent a local edition of a few bottles of home brew. The editor who received for publication a wedding announcement and a notice of social sale:

"With much and Miss Anderson were disposed of at 10 a.m. one mile west of a beautiful cluster of roses on her breast and two white calves before a background of green implements to numerous (1) gardenia in the presence of about seventy guests, including two milk cows, six milks and one bab-shed. Rev. Jackson told the nuptial knot, with 200 feet of hay rope, and the herald couple left on a good Green plan for an instant trip. They will be at home to friends with one good baby buggy and a few kitchen utensils ten months from date. To responsible parties and some chickens.—EX.
